A detailed map of Kentucky's 59 judicial districts is shown. Each district is color-coded and labeled with its name. A portrait of the judge for that district is placed over the map. Many portraits include a number representing the judge's term length or another identifier. The map also shows the counties within each district. Some districts, such as the one in the north-central part of the state, are labeled as 'Vacant' and have a black silhouette for a portrait. The map covers all counties of Kentucky, including Jefferson, Fayette, and all other counties.
